

Dunn takes lead over Campbell

Incumbent Republican 17th District legislator Jim Dunn, who Thursday said he wasn't yet ecstatic when the vote county brought him within 144 votes of Democratic rival Pat Campbell, is likely at least smiling today since the continuing count of Clark County ballots put the veteran legislator ahead by 308 votes Friday.

Most of the ballots in an election that brought out over 63 percent of the local electorate have been counted, and, although tabulations will continue next week, it appears Dunn's lead is definitive.

Douglas Zaharko appointed director of new comprehensive healing center

Douglas Zaharko has been named director of the Southwest Washington Medical Center's new Wound Healing Center. The center, which will serve patients for patients with chronic and hard-to-heal wounds, opens in January.

Zaharko most recently was medical management program manager for one of Southwest Washington Health Systems' Clark United Providers. Previously he had been a clinical manager for PeaceHealth Medical Group, Longview. He also had worked for the Vancouver Clinic.

A graduate of Carroll College, Helena, Mont., Zaharko served in a special forces group in the U.S. Army National Guard and is a retired law enforcement officer.

Southwest Washington Medical Center employs 3,280 persons and has 545 active medical staff members.
